Hawk-eagle

1st in captivity to be hatched, bred in Davao

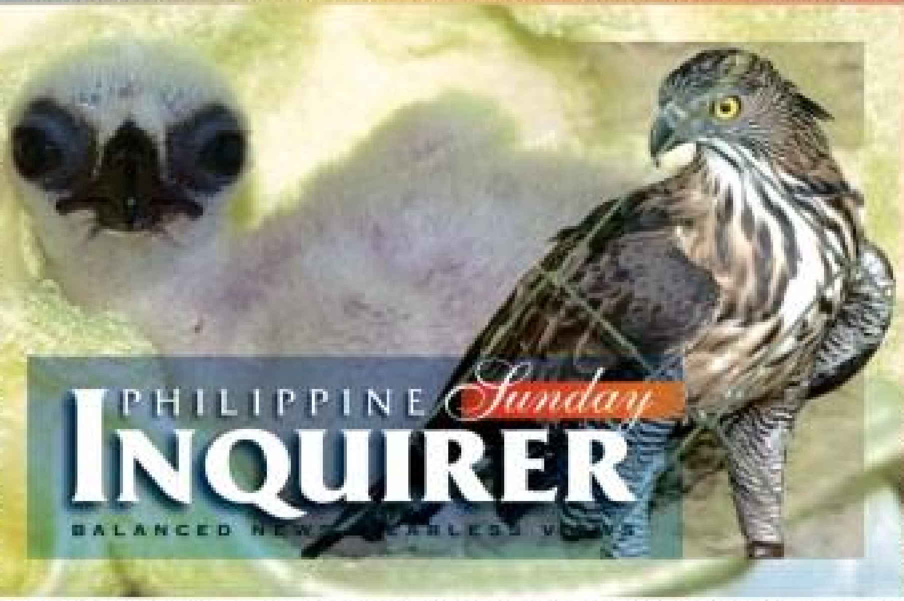

By Germelina Lacorte
Inquirer Mindanao

DAVAO CITY—After a successful Philippine eagle captive breeding program that spanned two decades, the Philippine Eagle Foundation (PEF) yesterday announced that it has successfully bred and hatched another threatened species of bird of prey.

Dennis Salvador, the PEF director, said the first Pinsker's hawk-eagle (Nisaetus pinskeri) bred in captivity broke its shell on April 2 at the PEF Center in Malagos village in Calinan district here.

LULLABY IN BIRDLAND This white and fluffy Pinsker's hawk-eagle chick is the first of its species bred and hatched in captivity at the Philippine Eagle Foundation in Davao City. Its sex will be known only within the next five years. It's classified "valuable" because its small population is rapidly decreasing. Superimposed at right is its mother hawk-eagle who goes by the code name FAMSG captured in Maguindanao.

EIGHT Chinese fishing boats and a surveillance ship involved in a standoff with the Philippines left the disputed Scarborough Shoal in the West Philippine Sea on Friday, easing tensions between China and the Philippines.

But the tensions spiked again yesterday afternoon after China sent back a surveillance vessel to the shoal and a Chinese aircraft flew over a Philippine Coast Guard vessel facing off a Chinese ship in the area.

The Chinese fly-by yesterday afternoon may have been the response to the Philippines' surveillance fly-by made in the morning, the Inquirer has learned from a highly placed of-

Pulling Bicol up from poverty with coco fiber ropes

The story of Dr. Justino Arboleda

By Ralph Fajardo
Contributor

IN THE early 90s, when the then dean of Bicol University's College of Agriculture, Dr. Justino Arboleda, first heard of a report naming Bicol as the second poorest province in the Philippines, he was incredulous. "I could not believe it! How could Bicol be the second poorest province?" he asked. "We are so rich in coconut trees, the tree of life itself."

He then continued, "So we conducted our own investigation in the university and to our dismay, we found that the report was correct." That started Dr. Arboleda's crusade to discover what had caused Bicol's poverty and, more importantly, how to help alleviate it.

The quest eventually led him to leave his comfortable spot in the academe. He went straight to where these poor people were—the coconut farmers—to be able to give them an alternative means of livelihood by starting his own coconut husk processing company, now known as Coco Technologies Corporation (Cocotech).

"In school, we always hear that the coconut tree is the tree of life, that every part of the tree is useful," he explains. "But in real life, we do not use every part of the tree. The coconut husk, for instance, is thrown away more than 99 percent of the time. It is considered farm waste—but when you think about it, there are actually so many things you could do with the coconut husk."

As an agricultural engineering graduate from the Tokyo University, with a master's and a doctorate degree to boot, Dr. Arboleda certainly knew what he was talking about. All the know-how, he already had. There was just one crucial thing that kept him from turning coco fiber (from coconut husk) into a profitable business venture: funding.

"At that time, nobody believed you could make money from coco fiber," he says. "Wherever we went, they laughed at us. One banker that we tried to borrow from even scolded me. He says, 'You in the academe are so full of yourselves, but you are unwilling to invest your own money into them.'"

With this challenge thrown in his face, Dr. Arboleda decided to do exactly what that banker said he would not do. He took his family's savings, borrowed what he could from his siblings, and with the P250,000 that he was able to pool, plus the 1-hp motor piece of land his in-laws lent him, he started his very own husk processing factory.

DR. ARBOLEDA: He pulled Bicol up with coco fiber ropes

Incidentally, for him to be able to focus on the business, Dr. Arboleda also resigned from his dean position in Bicol University. "I knew I would need to be away most of the time to market our products, and I did not want people to say that I continued to receive a salary even when I was not present at the university."

With his salary out of a fixed income gone, Dr. Arboleda took on consultancy work to support his family's needs as his business attempt to get off the ground. This consultancy sent him to overseas conferences. When it sent him to Germany less than a year after the business started, he took advantage of that opportunity to market his coco fiber products.

He educated his audience on coco fiber's superior ability to absorb moisture, pressure, sound, and odors. He explained that coco fiber has natural anti-fungal and antibacterial properties. It is resistant to insects and mold. It could be used to insulate buildings from heat, cold, and sound. Coco fiber doormats ensured that all dirt and water from the streets stayed outside the shiny buildings' doors. Coco fiber was good for car seat cushions, as scratching posts, planting materials, even fertilizer. To top it all off, it was affordable, durable, and completely biodegradable.

INSTALLING coconut fiber at Estero De Paco

The Europeans knew a good thing when they saw it. Suddenly, Dr. Arboleda had a huge export market. When he came home, he had to ask his in-laws if he could expand his factory to cover the whole farm. They agreed on a lease price, and the factory grew.

For several years after that, Dr. Arboleda was able to give livelihood to around a thousand households in Bicol. The people who spun his coco fiber ropes, which formed the base of many of his products, earned more money than they ever earned from just farming. Even the children were allowed to help, but only under Dr. Arboleda's condition that they stayed in school. If the kids dropped out of school, the family was removed from the list of contractors. The families, of course, kept their kids in school. It all worked as it was supposed to.

Then disaster struck. One day, while visitors were at the factory, somebody accidentally dropped a lighted cigarette on a pile of coconut husks. "We are normally very strict against smoking near the factory, but visitors can be a bit hard to monitor," Dr. Arboleda said. A raging fire resulted, and just

BluGre to bring Davao's durian coffee to the world

'Twenty for 2012' refers to the 20 stores the company will open this year

Text and photos by Germelina Lacorte
Inquirer Mindanao

THE COFFEE shop that brought the coffee lifestyle to Davao more than a decade ago is now eyeing to bring Davao city to the world.

BluGre Café, whose name has become synonymous with Davao City for [illegible] the coffee blend mixed with the pulp of Davao's [illegible] fruit durian, is finally setting its eyes not only on major cities in the country but also in major cities in Asia, Canada and the US.

"Twenty for 2012," says BluGre coffee owner Gaudencio Garduñez, referring to the 20 stores they are set to open for the year 2012.

Garduñez says they have inked an agreement with a number of partners to open branches, targeting durian-eating countries like Singapore, Malaysia and Thailand, and cities with large concentration of Filipinos, including Las Vegas in the US, Toronto in Canada and Adelaide, Australia.

"We are going to make our presence felt in these places because these are cities and countries where our partners are located," he says.

He remembers how he, himself, a coffee lover, and with [illegible], first opened its Davao branch in 1998 as a spinoff of the [illegible] brand they are selling. But even from the beginning, Garduñez says he already recognized the need to make his brand stand out by making a difference in the highly competitive market.

"Even before we opened, I already made sure that we should have something different to offer, something that really speaks about Davao," he says. "That's how we started experimenting with durian coffee."

Gaudencio says not all people come to like the durian fruit the first time they taste it, but coffee tends to drown out its pungent taste and masks its strong and disagreeable smell; that's why the durian coffee could be a good introduction to the actual fruit.

"Offering them durian coffee could be the first step in introducing the fruit to non-durian eaters," says Garduñez, who grew up in Manila and did not take to the fruit easily the first time he tasted it.

"Like I did, not all people would come to like the fruit immediately," he says. "But if you do it in the coffee, the coffee covers its strong and disagreeable smell, that's the first step," he says. "Soon afterwards, they can eat the durian fruit, itself."

When BluGre opened its first branch at the Landco building in 1998, the coffee culture has not yet swept Davao. But when young urban professionals and students discovered the pleasure of hanging around the cozy, well-designed interiors, having long leisure conversations or simply relaxing in its quiet ambiance, word got around, giving birth to the coffee lifestyle of the Davaoeños. This triggered the sprouting of more coffee shops all over Davao, so that, in one of the posts [illegible] in the late 90s, night bars had complained of [illegible] crowds as more people hang around cafes at night.

BluGre has not only become popular among the locals but also among travelers and visitors.

"When you're from Manila, you will likely look for something different when you

Benj, of course, had no ex balls. He's the grandchild any grandmother could wish for: bright, diligent, responsible, outstanding in just about everything including what ought to be the least important matter—looks. Besides, she hadn't really missed out on graduation balls, having already gone to De La Salle's, Xavier's and the Ateneo's. She, in fact, confessed to feeling grateful—without a graduation ball to attend, she is spared having to ask a boy to be her escort.

The alternative ball went from 1:30 to 7:30 p.m. A hundred and fifty children arrived with some of their parents at Assumption College and were welcomed by Benj's batchmates, who would be their big sisters—one—for the day, taking charge of them as they went around, [illegible] the teaching centers and making their choice for quick classes in singing and dancing, arts and crafts, storytelling, music, photography and sports. Or were they just as inspired as Marcos?

May pilgrimage tours with 'healing priest' Fr. Nelson Osorio

"HEALING PRIEST" Rev. Fr. Nelson Osorio, SVD, celebrates a Healing Mass and give spiritual direction and sacramental reconciliation on two pilgrimage tours being organized by La Kiti Pilgrimage Tours Inc. this May.

May 3 will be spent at the Monastery in Tarlac where the sacred relic of the True Cross of Christ is housed in a silver reliquary, the only one of its kind in Asia. Tour includes stops at the San Sebastian Cathedral in Tarlac City, the Chapel of Our Lady of Lourdes in Hacienda Luisita, and the Aquino Museum at the Aquino Center.

On May 10, the pilgrims will visit the Shrine of Our Lady of Caysasay and pay homage to the 17th-century miraculous image of the Most Holy Virgin. Tour includes stops at the Archdiocesan Shrine of St. Joseph and its Museum, the Basilica of San Martin de Tours, two 18th-century private houses and shopping.

Pilgrimage tour cost is P2,000 per tour, inclusive of land transportation through an air-conditioned motor coach, buffet lunch and services of a DOT-accredited tour guide. Only 40 participants will be accommodated per tour. Call La Kiti Pilgrimage Tours Inc. at 8929445; 0917-8271818; 0917-5219808.

SCARLETT Johansson

Embarrassed by naked pics

NEW YORK—Scarlett Johansson admits it still bothers her to think countless people have likely seen her naked.

The actress speaks out in the May issue of Vogue magazine about having her e-mail hacked last year, where private photos she took for ex-husband Ryan Reynolds were leaked online.

Johansson talks about going out to dinner and feeling "paranoid" that people in the restaurant have seen her body. Still, she says she doesn't want pity and has coped by "making it all cute." Because of that, she has stopped following celebrity gossip and reading stories about herself.

She says she's found that ignorance is bliss. She adds that she's "way happier" and "more creative" now.

The May issue of Vogue goes on sale in the United States on April 24. AP

Sun Cellular launches Smart Add-on Plans

Since Sun Cellular became a member of the country's largest telecommunications group, Sun has unveiled to the market its newest postpaid service which provides special call and text allocations to Smart and Talk N Text subscribers.

"As we synergize with our sister companies in the PLDT Group, and continue to grow our network for wider reach, we will be introducing more and more innovative products and services that offer best value to our postpaid customers," says Ricky O. Peña, Senior Vice President for Postpaid, Broadband and New Business Marketing of Sun Cellular.

For only P99 on top of their monthly service fees, current Sun postpaid subscribers can avail of the Smart Text Add-on Plan with 1,000 texts to Smart numbers or the Smart Call Add-on Plan with 50 hours of Sun-to-Smart calls.

Meanwhile, Sun also offers the Smart Combo Add-on Plan with 1,250 texts and 50 minutes of calls to Smart for only P199 per month, on top of the regular monthly bill.

Peña says these new add-on plans would yield significant savings on the internetwork correspondence of Sun Cellular subscribers to Smart customers. "These plans have been designed to give our subscribers as much as 90% savings on texts and will even let them enjoy call rates of as low as P2 per minute to Smart" he adds.

In December last year, Sun Cellular partnered with Smart to come up with the Smart-Sun Dual Plan 649 offering which features a dual postpaid subscription to both Sun Cellular and Smart networks with unlimited texts to Sun and Smart, 4 hours of Sun calls and 2 hours of Smart calls.

Sun is undergoing several network enhancements in its service areas covering Luzon and Mindanao. Peña further explained that these expansion efforts are being achieved through synergies and infrastructure support from the PLDT group.

'Cabaret' painstakingly restored to digital cinematic glory

Film's background

African circus at Resorts World; Chinese acrobats at Smart Araneta

"CIRQUE MOTHER Africa 2012" goes onstage from April 19 to 22 at the Newport Performing Arts Theater of Resorts World Manila.

The show—dubbed as a "circus of the senses" and which has traveled around the world—is composed of 36 dancers, percussionists, singers, acrobats and contortionists celebrating African art and culture.

Call 9089999.

'Legends of the Dragon'

"Legends of the Dragon: An Acrobatic Spectacular" features the Grand China National Acrobatic Circus from May 9 to 13 at the Smart Araneta Coliseum.

The Grand China National Acrobatic Circus is composed of performers who regaled the world during the Beijing Olympics.

"Legends of the Dragon" fuses theater and comedy in various acts including the kung fu moves in Light and Shadow. Water Meteor (recipient of the Golden Award in the International Circus Festival in Poland in 1998) and acrobatics and spear in Diabolo (winner of the President Award at the 26th International Circus Festival of Tomorrow in France).

Call 9111000.

Avenged Sevenfold

American metal band Avenged Sevenfold performs on April 26 at the Smart Araneta Coliseum.

The group has sold more than four million albums and won second place on the website Ultimate Guitar's poll of the Top 10 Bands of the Decade (2000s).

Avenged Sevenfold is composed vocalist M. Shadows, lead guitarist Synyster Gates, rhythm guitarist Zacky Vengeance, and bassist Johnny Christ.

The band's current drummer is Arin Ilejay, whose father ... Mexican descent ... formerly of the American metalcore band Confide, has taken over Mike Portnoy (formerly of Dream Theater) who temporarily stepped in for original Avenged Sevenfold drummer Jimmy "The Rev" Sullivan who died in December 2009.

"LEGENDS of the Dragon" features the Grand China National Acrobatic Circus.

Dayne/McCain

Special discounts will be given to early-bird ticket buyers of the Taylor Dayne–Edwin McCain back-to-back concert on May 30 at Waterfront Hotel Cebu and June 1 at the SM Mall of Asia Arena in Pasay.

All ticket buyers are entitled to 20-percent discount until April 30.

Call 4702222, 5162055 or 2235262 loc. 320 for the Manila show, and (032) 2326888 loc. 131 or (032) 2326888 loc. 8729 for the Cebu show.

Titanic mystery solved

AS THE 100th anniversary of Titanic's sinking approaches, a team of experts joined forces to answer the most haunting question about the disaster: Just how did the "unsinkable" ship plunge into the North Atlantic waters on April 15, 1912?

Two years ago, History took part in a major underwater expedition alongside the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute and RMS Titanic Inc. that yielded unprecedented discoveries and a comprehensive map of Titanic's watery grave.

A two-hour special, which premieres on History tonight at 8, documents the mission, captures the map-making process and presents unexpected findings. Visit www.historyasia.com/titanic for repeat airings and other details.
